A STOLEN CHILD.

Green, the Abductor of Netta Sizemore.
Traced to Nevada.

Sedalia Democrat.

A few days ago the Democrat chronicled the abduction of a little girl by the name of Sizemore, from her father's wagon by a couple named Green. The child was stolen while en route to Sedalia with its father.
Sizemore has been on track of Green and his female companion since that time, but without obtaining a clue to their whereabouts. The following letter is self explanatory:

Mound City, Mo., June 25.—To the postmaster, Sedalia: Dear Sir—I notice in the Bates county Times an account of a child being stolen near Sedalia. Parties answering the description precisely camped at my place from the 20th to the 22d inst.
When they left they went south; said they were going to Nevada. At the time they were here they were in company with four other wagons.
The man Green, who had the child, said they met the other wagons at Harrisonville. They said the child was an orphan that they were raising, and they called her Netta. If you can from this give the parents, or any one interested, any information, please do so. The father's name, as given, was William Sizemore.

Respectfully,
G. B. WALKER.

Of Interest to Fruit Growers.

The state horticultural society recently passed the following resolutions, which should be earnestly considered by every fruit grower in the state:

In view of the fact that the State of Missouri has at this time of the year a good prospect for a good crop of good apples; and that from some place or places within the State there is almost a certainty that a good show of our fruit can be made this fall, and of the further fact that Mr.
Johnson, secretary of the coming exhibition in St. Louis, has offered the very best part of their great building as a place in which to exhibit the horticultural products of Missouri, your committee would recommend:

That we make at the Exposition at St. Louis, this fall, the best possible show of the horticultural and floral products of the State.

That the State society invite the county and local societies to assist and co-operate with the State society in preparing and making the exhibit.

The county courts be requested to appropriate the money necessary to defray part or all of the expenses of exhibiting the products of their respective counties.

That all citizens who may have it in their power to assist in this work be requested so to do, each in his own way, and as he or she may have opportunity.

That arrangements be made soon for the gathering of the early fruits, and for cold storage to receive them.

That the proper means be placed in the hands of working committees to do their work well.

That railroad companies and express companies be requested to give free transportation to all the products for this exhibit, and to all persons traveling on this business.

And, that all of our newspapers and of our immigration societies be earnestly requested to help to bring this matter early, often and promi-nently before the people as one of the best possible means of advertising the State.

AT HIS OLD HOME.

Frank James, the Noted Ex-Bandit.
Treads His Native Heath
Once More.

Frank James, the once noted bandit, arrived here on the Owensboro & Nashville train from Russellville yesterday morning. He was met at the depot by several of his old acquaintances who knew him here in times past, and a divergence of the subject of his whereabouts was all a subject of conversation. He was a relative of the Hite family here, and his visit now is especially to see them. There has been but little change in his appearance since he and his daring brother Jesse made South Logan county a rendezvous eight or ten years ago. At that time many of our citizens sympathized with them on account of their war record, and claimed that they would be good citizens if they were only given a chance; and they are warmer in their friendship now than ever, as Frank has led the exemplary life he has since his voluntary surrender and release from prison. James' friends have rather expected, from the newspaper reports, to see a sad and broken man almost in the throes of death, but were agreeably surprised.
All of the ex-outlaw's, old cautious-ness and reticence still cling to him, but his step has the same elastic, wiry spring as of yore. In company with a couple of friends he took a horseback ride through the country north of here yesterday afternoon, and looked with mournful gaze on scenes of many former narrow escapes when he was hunted by an army of detectives. The party rode out the Russellville road, and when they arrived opposite Dick Combs' gate, a mile from town, James departed from his accustomed taciturnity and narrated an incident that amused him very much, about a conversation he had there one Sunday morning some years ago with one of Pinkerton's men who was in search of him. He said that the man he feared above all others was an honest old carpenter named John James, by the way no relative of his.
Old John was one of Forrest's troopers, who had met Frank during the war. Frank said he knew that old John did not fear the devil, and that he was equally as well satisfied that his love of law would cause him to attempt his arrest if ever he recognized him. The ex-outlaw wiped away a tear when told that honest old John was no more.

On arriving at the pond just beyond the Gilbert farm the party turned off into the belt of fine timber that skirts along the road there, and at the suggestion of James, dis-mounting, threw their bridle reins over their arms and strolled leisurely along in the shade to the little old mansion, where George Hite, the uncle of the James boys, lived, where they frequently stopped when in Kentucky, and where many unsuccessful attempts were made to capture them.

When the party arrived in town again at sunset, James went to the house of a friend, enjoyed a quiet supper and was visited by a few acquaintances.

He is keeping very quiet as he dislikes all public demonstrations, and especially hates to be looked on as a reformed human devil.—Adair-ville (Ky.) special to Courier-Journal.

Peculiar

In the combination, proportion, and preparation of its ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures where other preparations entirely fail. Peculiar in its good name at home, which is a "tower of strength abroad," peculiar in the phenomenal sales it has attained, Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most successful medicine for purifying the blood, giving strength, and creating an appetite.

The speech of S. W. Dooley, of Rich Hill, before our club, was pronounced a most excellent effort in reduction of tariff. Replete with logic and oratory he carried conviction to the hearts of his hearers.
Even republicans are doubting the advisability of their protection plank. Some like the party but since Dooley's speech they are opposed to protection and will concur with the great democratic principle, most good to the most people. May Mr. D. live to make many more speeches of this character, thereby assisting the great democratic party.
